size trout they can spare. There are many showing their real sportsmanship by not taking more than they need and it's surprising that so many are willing to throw back so many after a talk on the subject of replanting. Fred has asked several camps on the Manistee River to start a pool on this subject at their cabins for the largest fish thrown back and the largest number thrown back, the pool to be divided Labor Day with the winners. He tried this last year and had hundreds of fish returned to the stream after care was taken in handling and so forth. Just A-1 sportsmanship, as the beautiful picture of an Indian fishing with this motto printed on it states "He never took more than he needed."

Oil's Primary Problem . . .

The petroleum industry's major problem at present is to lay plans and build facilities to satisfy unprecedented demands for oil. That is the gist of papers delivered before a meeting of directors of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

There are three primary reasons for the existence of this problem. During the war years, the industry was unable to do sufficient drilling of new wells or to carry on normal replacement and expansion of pipeline and refinery capacity. Since then, there has been a shortage of materials for new equipment. Lastly, the post-war demand for oil products rose to record levels instead of dropping as had been expected.

The best forecasts indicate that there will be a continuing increase in demand for oil products throughout the world during the next five years. It is expected that, exclusive of Russia, world consumption will be up to the tremendous figure of 9,400,000 barrels a day by 1951—30 percent above 1946. By areas, it is believed that for the five-year period, United States' demand will increase 23 percent, the rest of the Western Hemisphere will show a 32 percent gain, while the Eastern Hemisphere, which bore the physical ravages of the war, will require 50 percent more oil.

All this implies a clear challenge to the American oil industry. The challenge has been accepted. Both domestic and foreign development is going ahead as rapidly as conditions permit, and research is making possible great progress in utilization of crude oil. The world's insatiable appetite for petroleum must be met.

NEW JEEP TRUCK

Efficiency, adapted to the needs of agriculture and industry, has been realized by Willys-Overland Motors with the introduction of this conventional-drive Jeep truck. Fourth unit in the company's line of commercial vehicles, it features the 60 hp Jeep engine, a 118" wheelbase, seven body styles, 4,700 to 5,300 pound gross vehicle weight, and 3/4 to 1 ton payload. This is the new model.

vantage of our opportunities in life. Our opportunities come unannounced and are governed by the Divine Power of which we know so little. When this opportunity comes, there will be no time for preparation—we must be prepared at that moment. If we take advantage of what we have been taught in school, we will have the knowledge, will, hope and desire to make good our opportunity.

Education for our future vocation will help us to acquire the skills necessary to contribute to the welfare of our country. We have learned that every family in America can not enjoy a high standard of living until there are enough goods and services for all to enjoy. But, there will never be sufficient goods and services produced until every worker has sufficient skill to contribute to the national production as much as he desires to receive from it. The only means to attain this skill necessary for this type of production is through education—a higher and higher level of education for the entire United States.

Since education comes to us in the form of a task, it meets with much resistance and is often treated with very little respect. If everyone realized the advantage of education and its effect on their future life, they would no longer consider it a task but a method of enabling them to gain the qualities which are so necessary for successful life.

Our motto, "Finished Yet Beginning", not only symbolizes the end of our high school career, but also the beginning of a new span of life. May this new beginning be successful for each and every member of the graduating class of 1947.

SALUTATORY

By Phyllis Newell

Parents, Faculty, Friends: We, the Class of 1947, welcome you to our class night program. This program is a brief summary of the events and occurrences which have taken place within the past four years of our school life. This review, however, can hardly be an adequate measure of the depths of our emotions as we approach this night with the realization that our school activities are now nearing their completion. Yet we experience some comfort from the realization that we can face the future with the knowledge that it holds for us golden opportunity—an opportunity which we must meet and take advantage of on our individual merit and ability.

We face this future with a certain measure of confidence because we are encouraged by the knowledge that the development of these opportunities has been the principal objective of our scholastic training.

Our program tonight is somewhat different from programs offered in previous years. We have taken the customary routine of class night and have woven a plot throughout. For the remainder of our evening with you, we, the Senior Class of 1947, take pleasure in offering our class night program, written and staged entirely by us, entitled "The Seniors Judgment Day". Of course, we can not promise you a polished production—but we do promise you that we will try our very best to make you glad you came.

I thank you once more for coming and extend to you in the name of the class, our most grateful and sincere welcome.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

By Harry Miller

Parents, Faculty and Friends: Tonight we, the Class of 1947, have reached a definite goal in preparing for our life's work, and we are very happy that you are able to be with us at such an important turning point in our life.

I would like to congratulate and thank every member of our class, congratulate them for having taken such a big step to prepare themselves for a world of hardship, and thank them for the fine co-operation they have shown me throughout the year.

You, the citizens of Grayling, have made it possible for us to come this far. The only fitting tribute we can make to you is to succeed in life, and I am sure every member of our class will do his utmost to fulfill the hopes you have in us. At the present time all we can do to show our appreciation is to offer our thanks, but in the future, we hope to accomplish something that will really express our gratitude.

With the joy of Graduation comes the sorrow of leaving old friends. We have thus far traveled together, but now our paths must separate. Our one consolation is in the memory of these everlasting friendships.

During this last year our class has had in its possession this gavel which signifies the traditional authority of the Senior Class. At this time I would like to present this symbol to the President of the Class of 1948.

Richard Miller, please step forward. Mr. President, it gives me great pleasure at this time to present to you this gavel and with it our authority as Seniors. It is with a sincere wish for your success that I give you this, and I hope your class will co-operate with you as my class has with me.

Ag Year Books Now Ready

"Science in Farming", or, in other words, the 1947 Year Book of the Department of Agriculture, is just "off the press" and a limited number of copies are available for distribution by him, Representative Roy O. Woodruff has announced. Each Member of Congress is again allotted a quota for his constituents, as in years past.

Representative Woodruff reminds that this is the first Yearbook put out by the Department of Agriculture since 1942, and, as it spans the intervening years, the book naturally is replete with much valuable data by reason of progress, new discoveries, etc., in agriculture as well as allied lines of endeavor. Containing almost a thousand pages, and with an informative index and a large number of illustrations, it deals plainly and clearly on every matter discussed. Its general topics include animals, plants, trees, soils, insects, new products, food and clothing, and new practices. Of particular interest should be the seven-page discussion on "Saving Our Sugar Beets".

Representative Woodruff now has his allotted quota of the Yearbook available, which should prove of more than ordinary interest to farmers primarily. However, it should not be forgotten that in the preparation of this book the interests of others were not lost sight of—especially those engaged in gardening, chemistry, beekeeping, stock raising, conser-

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Can't Break His Good Habits!

Bert Childers was saying, it's funny how so many of our wartime habits stick with us.

Bert likes plenty of butter on his bread, but even now he can't get over spreading it like it was scarce as hen's teeth. And as a war-worker, Bert used to stick to a temperate glass of beer on time off; and he still holds fast to beer and moderation.

Same way with Bert's wife. She not only has no trouble saving used fats, and waste paper. She's learned from wartime necessity to save every single thing that might possibly be used again.

From where I sit, it's mighty good that so many of these common-sense habits like thrift and moderation have stayed with us. Because they belong in America—along with tolerance, and mutual respect for one another's rights. They're habits that have helped to make this country strong and neighborly and free.

vation, horticulture, housekeeping and such. The Yearbook should be particularly useful to returning servicemen who want to farm and to persons who will find in these pages details of a product that may help them build or enlarge businesses of their own.

Requests for copies should be addressed to Roy O. Woodruff, House of Representatives, Washington 25, D. C., and they will be accommodated while the limited supply lasts.

Infantile Paralysis

Doctors of Medicine who have been waging indefatigably the fight against infantile paralysis now are able to report that 75 to 85 per cent of the stricken will either recover completely or will show marked improvement if given the kind of care proven most beneficial.

This is reassuring news to parents who have had nightmares of their children being permanently crippled.

Incidentally, this sickness is not confined entirely to children. Many adults are victims annually.

Among the leaders in the war against poliomyelitis are the doctors and research assistants in the medical laboratories of the University of Michigan, the Michigan Department of Health and Wayne University. Their work ranks high among investigations being conducted in twenty-five medical institutions throughout the country.

To date definite knowledge as to how the germ enters the body has not been discovered and a positive cure has not been perfected. But progress has been steady, valuable information has been accumulated and medical science continues its fight. Eventually, it is predicted, victory will be won in this battle as it has been against other contagious diseases. Doctors of Medicine are confident.

"Health News" is presented by your Doctor of Medicine as a health service of the Michigan State Medical Society.

takes the Lead in Rheumatic Fever Control

Rheumatic fever is a blight upon health that must be detected in its early stage in order to be dealt with effectively. Alert to the need for catching this stealthy victimizer before it can become entrenched, the Michigan medical profession has set up state-wide Rheumatic Fever Control centers wherein diagnostic specialists track down the disease. Every Michigan community is urged to utilize this voluntary medical service, which is but one of the many projects initiated by the state organization of doctors of medicine in the interest of promoting Michigan health.

MICHIGAN STATE
MEDICAL SOCIETY

June 25 Is Opening Date

Wednesday, June 25, is the day came pole fishermen begin some of Michigan's most leisurely and productive fishing, and bass fishermen begin some of the state's sportiest angling.

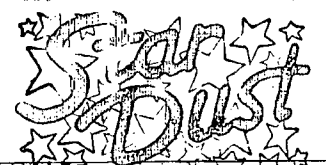

It will be the first major fishing season of the year to open with prospects of favorable weather. Ice fishermen found the going rough; trout fishermen had the least opening in years, and it was still chilly when pike fishermen went onto the lakes May 15.

There was no serious winter-kill last season, and inland lakes throughout the state have plenty of water. The late spring may have delayed some spawning.

The Conservation Department reports the regulations are unchanged. On June 25, the lakes south of Highway M-46 from Muskegon to Port Sanilac, are open to fishing for all species of fish, and in lakes north of the highway, where other fishing has been in progress, bluegills and black bass become legal game.

Bluegills and sunfish have a size limit of six inches, a creel limit of 15. When taken in combination with perch, rock bass and crappies, the combined total is 25, but not more than 15 of these may be bluegills.

The black bass size limit, for both largemouth and smallmouth, is 10 inches, and the creel limit is five a day—with walleyed or northern pike counted as a part of that five if any are taken. The Great Lakes limit is 10 a day—double the inland waters creel—but not more than five of the 10 may be bass, and not more than five of the 10 may be northern pike.

EZRA STONE was hurrying to an "Aldrich Family" rehearsal when he noticed a vaguely familiar looking man peering at the block-long line of people waiting to buy tickets at the Music hall. He was Michael Curtiz, whom Ezra hadn't seen since Curtiz directed the movie version of "This Is the Army," which Ezra staged on Broadway. Curtiz commented, in fancy di-that only in New York would people get up at ten in the morning to stand in line to see a picture—and, looking sadly at "The Egg and I" sign, added "And it isn't even my picture!" Incidentally, Stone can have a supervisory post with a major network if he wants it.

Larry Parks, who makes a gag personal appearance in "My Awful Wife," playing a movie star, actually sings in the picture. "The Jolson Story" star joins Lucille Ball, Franchot Tone, Edward Everett Horton and several hundred other film players in rendering "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow"—so don't count on knowing how Park's voice sounds when raised in song.

Rudy Wissler, who was Al Jolson's voice as a young boy in "The Jolson Story," shags as himself in a new picture—he's soloist with the St. Luke's Boy's Choir, which will be seen and heard in RKO's "Fighting Father Dunne."

"Senator Ford," producer-creator and a star of "Can You Top This?" has finished a six-month survey of the jokes submitted to the program by the listening audience. It shows that most of the jokes that got the best laughs were submitted by women. Now he'd like to know why, if women have a keener sense of humor than men, there aren't more professional female gagsters.

MGM's star, "Lassie," becomes the first dog star in radio when "The Lassie Show" makes its debut on ABC in June. Using a Hollywood radio cast in the dramatizations, "Lassie" will appear on each program with her trainer, Rudd Weatherwax.

When Brian Donlevy fell wounded after winning a gun duel with Bill Goodwin in the Seymour Nebenzal "Heaven Only Knows," he hit the spot on the lot where he met his first movie death 12 years ago, in "Barbary Coast." His performance as a black-shirted killer started him on the way to stardom.

People frequently ask Gabriel Heatter where he gets the inspirational stories which are dramatized Sunday nights on his MBS program, "A Brighter Tomorrow." He makes no secret of the source—explains that small-town newspapers are rich in stories with heart appeal. Heatter often reads as many as 200 a day, both because he's looking for material and because he enjoys them.

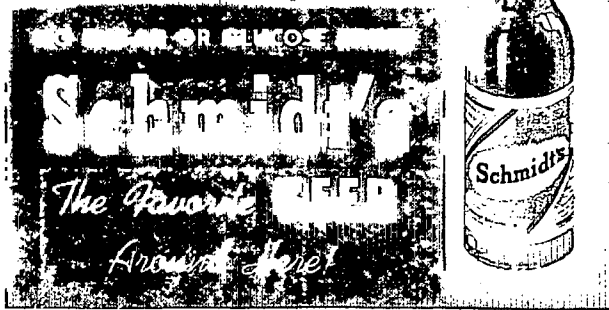

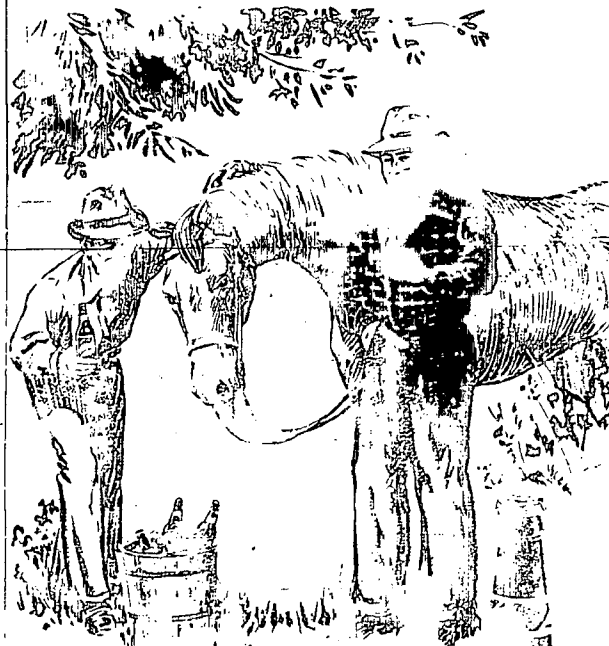

The most expensive out field in the world will be seen in 20th Century-Fox's "Bob, Son of Battle"; the studio planted 20 acres of oats about 30 miles from Hollywood—and paid for four hours of watering daily throughout the California summer. So Lon McCallister and Peggy Ann Garner will be seen in technicolor against a background of oats that cost about as much as caviar!

Katherine DeMille, who has a top supporting role in her father's "Unconquered," worked on the sets three months. During all that period she formally referred to Director Cecil B. as "Mr. DeMille."

was an exciting game and the one of them enjoyed it immensely. To Johnny it was like being on the team again and having his girl sitting beside him on the bench. He caught himself believing this once or twice and then admitted that he could at least dream. When a triumphant Lexington chalked up a thirteen to twelve score for final victory it was with high spirits that Lexington started home.

The three of them stopped at a small roadside on their way back to the office. The juke box, nickel god of every dance floor, was playing the tunes that were popular that fall. Kit hummed while they were waiting for their order. Johnny, not having danced for so many months, hesitated to ask her if she would like to try it with him. But J. D., sensing his shyness, soon fixed matters.

"Johnny," he said, "if you don't ask Kit to dance, I will. And she'd look pretty funny dancing the way I learned to dance." He winked at Kit.

They danced well together. And once with her in his arms, Johnny knew that this was the way it would be. The piece they first danced to was "A Door Will Open"—slow and smooth. And he thought how right she was in his arms. Her hair brushed his cheek softly, and once he almost kissed her head, so near she was.

With Johnny's arms around her she felt that no longer was she Kit Willett, Basil's fiancée. She was a high school girl again, she was having a date with the football captain. Oh, it was good to be happy, to dance with the hero's arms about her and not to make words. There were no words to say, only the closeness of their young bodies. She did not need to remember that she must look for security and the future; tonight she only wanted to look for happiness.

J. D. sat at the table watching them. His eyes saw many things beyond their smiling faces and matched rhythm. He saw and was sad. His eyes misted, for he remembered how it was to love someone who belonged to another. But the girl he loved had belonged to one who would never release her—death. He looked closely at Kit, as if searching her face to see why she could not see the truth. She belonged to his Johnny. Why couldn't she see it before it was too late?

Only once did they speak, while they danced. "Johnny," she said, almost like a whisper.

Johnny Meets Up With Murphy Again
Johnny felt her pull away from his close embrace and looked up at him. "Yes, Kit?" he answered. Her lips were parted as if she had formed the words she wanted to say. She looked deeply into his eyes for a moment and then dropped her eyes from his face.

"Oh—nothing. I was just going to say—this is—fun, isn't it?" But he knew the words were not the words that she had meant to say at all.

The road home, or back to the Clarion, led past Martindale, and all three, J. D., Johnny and Kit, looked toward the brightly lighted mansion. It looked at once both ominous and gay.

fy Davis. At first he tried to free himself, but seeing it was useless, he acquiesced his narrow eyes and looked accusingly at Johnny.

"What are you doing here, Davis? Lookin' for trouble, maybe?" His red face grimaced with the pain of being held so rigidly. "You tell me first, Murphy?" Johnny asked him firmly. "None of your damn business!" "Maybe you'll give them a different answer down at the City Hall." He made a move to show him that he intended carrying out his threat. "Wait. . . What for do you want to get mixed up in this, Davis? This isn't your business. It's between me and the old lady. I got nothing ag'in you except you're always butting your nose in my affairs, seems."

They danced well together.

His attitude had changed, Johnny noticed, when he thought he would have to face the police.

The Martin-Davis Feud Flares Anew
Johnny thought quickly. It would be useless, he knew, to take him down to the jail; there was nothing they could do with him but give him a few days behind bars and this would do no one any good. After all, he had a wife and children at home, and maybe he would think twice now about coming back here.

Jerry Murphy was a sneak, a bully, but he was also a coward, and Johnny did not think he would do anything except talk about what he could do to Jennifer Martin. However, Johnny was to regret his decision greatly very soon.

He released Murphy and stood beside him. "Look, Murphy—I'll let you go this time, but if I ever catch you—" But his warning was interrupted by a voice behind them.

They turned quickly and faced the light that was pointing at them. It shone directly on Johnny's face. He was so stunned with the new turn of events and the blood from his cut still half blinding him, that he scarcely felt Murphy wrench free of his hold and run away from him.

He was so taken back at the sound of Henry's voice that he was speechless. "Just who I thought it would be. I've got you covered, Davis, don't move!" It was Henry's voice, but Johnny had recognized Basil standing behind his father.

at me, too. See the cut? We have more fun that way—throwing rocks at each other." Johnny was exasperated at the idleness of the argument.

The pair were too eager for acquiescence and ignored his mention of his cut forehead. "Well," Johnny asked sarcastically, "which tree are you planning to hang me from?"

At that moment J. D. appeared. "What's up, Johnny?" "But before he had a chance to explain, Basil answered curtly: "I suppose you don't have any idea, do you, J. D.?"

Johnny held his father back with one arm. He was not sure that J. D. could see Henry's gun.

"This is one for the papers, Dad. They think I'm their prowler!" "Why, you idiots! We were riding along—minding our own business—when Johnny jumped out of the car and ran up here like mad after the man."

Henry, who had not spoken since J. D. had come upon the scene, moved closer to Johnny and took him gingerly by the arm. "A likely story, Davis. But it won't do. I've got you covered—both of you—and I'll shoot straight—in this case, especially—if you know what I mean!"

But none of them moved very far because Kit came running up the drive at that moment. She was almost out of breath as she reached them.

"Johnny, J. D.—whatever is the matter?" Then noticing Henry and Basil, she looked from one to the other in confusion. "Kit, you stay out of this!" It was Basil commanding.

"Stay out of what? Say, what's all this? First Johnny jumps out of the car and runs up here, and then J. D. comes up to see what Johnny is—and they both stay! Did you catch him, Johnny?" She turned to Johnny.

Basil and Henry looked at each other and Henry reluctantly lowered his gun. They knew that their circumstantial evidence had just been removed.

Basil, however, looked accusingly at Kit.

Crawford County Library

During the war Ernie Pyle endeared himself to all America as the reporter who lived with G. I. Joe, slept in the mud with him, marched with him, fought mosquitoes with him, and wrote home about him in the simple, everyday language that America used and understands. About a year ago, Crawford County Library received a gift of "Ernie's" three war books, "Here's Your War," "Brave Men," and "The Last Chapter." With the war still uppermost in every one's mind, many local men just returned home, and many more still in the service, the books were very popular with local readers. At that time few were aware of the fact that long before he became America's best-loved war correspondent the Indiana farm boy had been editor of his college paper, aviation columnist, rewrite man, managing editor, and finally America's roving reporter, writing with the same fascinating candor and warm understanding tales of the men and women he met traveling to every corner of this great country.

"Home Country," the June selection of the Young People's Division of the Literary Guild, contains Ernie Pyle's America, everyone's America, as he found it ex-

Shoe Repairman Adding New Service

Realizing that good shoes are still hard to get at times, and knowing that every one has discarded a comfortable pair of shoes because they look "shabby," Bill Nawaty, proprietor of "Bill's Shoe Repair" on Cedar Street, has introduced an entirely new service to remedy the situation. New equipment has been purchased which gives old shoes a new "Factory Finish" in the color the shoes were originally, or a different color, if desired. The old finish is entirely removed, and a brand new one applied, and it is surprising how this will rejuvenate even the oldest looking shoes. Not only can regular leather shoes be treated, but patents, suedes, bucks, etc. So many times really comfortable shoes are tucked away in the closets because they look untidy, but that's all over now that this new process has been introduced.

Leather purses, brief cases, suit cases, bill folds and belts—in fact, anything made of leather can be given this treatment, and made to look like new again. Any of these items, including shoes, of course, can also be dyed without the offensive odors usually connected with dye jobs, and the finish is guaranteed not to rub off on clothing or stockings.

The best feature about this new service is that the cost is very nominal. Bill has several "Before and After" displays made up, and all are invited to visit his shop and see just what this service consists of.—Adv.

pressed in the lives and works, the hopes and dreams and achievements of the people who live just around the corner or over in the next block—people historians will never mention, but who day by day are writing the true, living American history.
